We brought you home November of 2011, along with your older sister. Over the last ten years, we watched you grow into the gentle, if not clumsy, giant you became. You never met a stranger, pretty girl. You greeted us at the door every single time we went somewhere. Your random begging never ceased to make us both laugh. Now that you're gone, your absence is like a weight here. Your loss gutted us both in ways I don't have words for. We both hope you found peace over the Rainbow Bridge.
